

1. The crown of life is awarded to those who produce divine good from their spiritual gift, ambassadorship function, and royal priesthood all accomplished from an ever-advancing biblical inventory while resolving difficulties through the application of problem-solving devices.

James 1:12 Happy is the advanced believer who continues to endure testing for the purpose of approval, he will receive the crown of life which the Lord has promised in eternity past for those who have personal love for Him. (EXT)

2. The crown of righteousness is given to advanced believers with emphasis on spiritual maturity. It is given for the development of virtue, honor, integrity, passing momentum tests, and fulfilment of the royal family honor code.

2 Timothy 4:7 I have fought the honorable fight. I have completed my course. I have preserved doctrine in my soul.

v. 8 In eternity, a crown of righteousness is reserved for me, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, will award me on that day [ the Evaluation Tribunal ]. And not to me only, but also to all those who have loved His appearance [ Rapture ]. (EXT)

3. The crown of glory is awarded to pastors who faithfully study and communicate Bible doctrine to their congregations. The evaluation is strictly about the accuracy of his message, if what he teaches is clearly presented, doctrinally accurate, and exegetically supported.

This pastor's modus operandi is reflected by his emphasis on doctrine. He is prepared academically and theologically sound based on the literal analysis of Scripture which is reflected in his oral presentation to his assigned congregation.

1 Peter 5:2 Feed the flock of God among you, exercising oversight, not under compulsion but willingly under God's direction, not for personal gain but from enthusiasm.

v. 3 And do not lord it over those entrusted to you, but be examples to the flock.

v. 4 Then when the Chief Shepherd appears, you will receive the crown of glory that never fades away. (EXT)

Final Synopsis:

1. Believers are commanded to grow in grace and the knowledge of their Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. (2 Peter 3:18)

2. The place where this spiritual growth is to take place is in a local church.
3. Believers are commanded to “stop habitually forsaking the command to assemble themselves together in the church.” (Hebrews 10:25)
4. By comparison to eternity, the time we have on this earth to grow in grace is limited to just a few decades on average.
5. This earthly residence is the base of operations for the believer to grow in grace all the way to spiritual maturity.
6. It is by means of the regular assembly that others are encouraged and motivated to attend and join the others as effective witnesses for the Prosecution in Lucifer’s case before the Divine Court of Appeals.
7. The esprit de corps that is gradually developed among those who consistently gather together is a source of encouragement for others to join the assembly.
8. The system by which the believer is enabled to make his spiritual advance begins with attendance at the local church where doctrine is being taught on a consistent basis.
9. The purpose for this consistent assembly is clearly stated in the two following passages:

James 5:8 You too be patient; facilitate [ aorist active imperative of στηρίζω (stēρίζō) ] your soul’s doctrinal inventory, for the Rapture [ παρουσία (parousía) ] of the Lord is imminent [ intensive perfect active indicative of ἐγγίζω (engízō) ]. (EXT)

Hebrews 10:25 stop habitually forsaking the command to assemble ourselves together in the synagogue/church, as is the consistent behavior of certain reversionists, but encouraging them through your consistency; and even all the more as you see the day of the Rapture [ ἡμέρα (hēméra) (+ παρουσία (parousía) ] being imminent [ futuristic present active participle of ἐγγίζω (engízō) ]. (EXT)

10. If the Rapture is imminent and could occur at any moment, then the believer is instructed to assemble himself together for the purpose of spiritual growth.
11. When the imminency of the Rapture is clearly understood, then attendance at the assembly of believers indicates the urgency of acquiring as much doctrine as possible should its arrival occur during their lifetimes.
12. You may ask the question, “Do I believe the Rapture is about to occur?” Don’t know. Imminency indicates that it is the next prophecy to be fulfilled on the divine agenda.

13. When it does occur, it will do so without warning as is indicated by this verse:

1 Thessalonians 4:16 The Lord Himself will descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trumpet of God, and the dead in Christ will rise first. (NASB)

14. “The dead in Christ will rise first.” This means they conceivably will hear these three things occur since they are returning from heaven in interim bodies toward the locations of their human bodies’ remains.
15. But what about “we who are alive and remain?” Are they going to hear these commands that take place way up in the air? Remember, this event is global. It will take place rapidly as the entire population of Church Age believers, dead and alive, will be assembled for their rapid transfer into the Third Heaven.
16. Ergo, there is in all likelihood no dependable warning about the execution of this final prophecy that concludes the Church Age.
17. That being the case, it is both advisable as well as urgent that the believer in Jesus Christ take seriously the opportunity each day provides to continue his spiritual growth toward maturity so that he may reap the rewards indicated by the winners in Revelation, chapters 2 through 3.

We now return to our study of the Letter of James where we left off at chapter 3, verse 7:

James 3:7 For every species of beasts and birds, of reptiles, and creatures of the sea, is tamed and has been tamed by the human race. (NASB)

James 3:7 The four taxonomic categories or Genera among living creatures are beasts [ animals: θηρίον (thēríon) ], and birds [ πετεινόν (peteinón) ], reptiles [ έρπετόν (herpetón) ], and creatures of the sea [ fish: ἐνάλιος (enálíos) ]. (EXT)

James 3:8 But no one can tame the tongue; it is a restless evil and full of deadly poison. (NASB)

1. This verse is a continuation of verse 7 but it is introduced by the adversative conjunction δέ (dé): “but.” It forms a contrast between man being able to subdue and control wild and untamed “living creatures,” but unable to tame and control his own tongue.
2. This is asserted by the phrase “no one can tame the tongue.” Interestingly, the Greek puts the noun, γλῶσσα (glōssa): “tongue,” first: “but the tongue no one is able to tame.”

3. By placing the word “tongue” first it deprives it of its case which normally is accusative and is usually the object of the verb, which here is the present active indicative of δύναμαι (dúnamai): “able.” In the NASB it is the word “can.”
4. Ordinarily, the noun “tongue” would occur at the end of the sentence. James places it first because it is the thing he wants to emphasize. It is like putting an implied exclamation point on it: “The tongue no one is able to tame!”
5. The verb “tame” is the aorist active infinitive of δαμάζω (damázō): “To reduce to stillness or quietness; to subdue or tame.”
6. James then expands on the tongue’s negative impact in two ways. The first is, “it is a restless evil.” The word “restless” is the adjective ἀκατάστατος (akatástatos): restless is fine but it also has the meaning of being “unstable.”
7. Synonyms of “unstable” include: “unbalanced, of unsound mind, mentally ill, deranged, demented, disturbed, unhinged, volatile.”<sup>5</sup>
8. This disturbing set of definitions for the deranged is followed by the noun, κακός (kakós): “evil.” This asserts that this man’s mind-set is “full of deadly poison.”
9. This phrase begins with the adjective, μεστός (mestós): “full” and defines how this evil is to be characterized. It is followed by a long, compound, multisyllabic adjective suggesting what it takes to describe this problem: θανατηφόρος (thanatēphóros).
10. This compound is composed of the noun, θάνατος (thánatos): “death,” and φέρω (phérō): “to bring.” Together they result in the adjective, “death-bringing.”
11. What brings this death is the noun, ἰός (iós): “the venom that serpents inject from their fangs.”
12. We have done some minor commentary on the Genus ἑρπετόν (herpetón): “reptile,” including two venomous species of snakes, the family Viperidae: rattlesnake, cottonmouth, copperhead, and bushmaster and the family Elapidae: Black Mamba, Coral, King Cobra, and Death Adder.
13. The viper has folded front fangs; it strikes, inserts venom, and withdraws. The Élapid has fixed front fangs; it strikes, bites, inserts venom, and chews and often repeats the last two steps.
14. It can be confidently stated that both species are “full of death-bringing poison.” James speaks metaphorically when he writes that the restless tongue does the same thing which no one can tame.

15. Occasionally venomous snakes run out of venom and thus out of ammo. Shortly, their venom sacs are reloaded.
16. On rare occasions, the tongue of the death-bringing reversionist goes silent while his soul conjures his next oral assault on its next victim.
17. The serpents' venom is replenished through natural process and is the major component of his defense department's ordinance against suspected enemies.
18. The death-bringing venom of the reversionist emerges from a reservoir of mental-attitude arrogance and hatred against anyone he decides needs a good, old-fashioned chewing out in the fashion of an Élapid.
19. The analogous venom of the reversionist is the result of mental attitude sins. His venom sacs are systematically refilled by the constant production of arrogance and hatred from the cosmic systems.
20. His mental-attitude sins produce the venom while the tongue functions as the fangs.
21. This habitual behavior pattern is expressed in numerous ways. The advanced reversionist, having lost touch with reality, is mentally deranged. Therefore, he can vacillate between apparent cordiality toward others and then suddenly spin on a dime by expressing hostility.
